By Joe Morey
News Editor

The Lac Courte Oreilles Tribal Governing Board recently announced it is applying for Joint Venture Funding through the Indian Health Service (IHS) to have a new health and wellness center's operations funded for 20 years.

LCO TGB member and liaison to the health center, Rose Gokee, said if the tribe is funded for the new facility, "It will cover 20 years of operational expenses and the health center would continue to receive its annual IHS funding."

Jason Weaver, LCO Secretary-Treasurer, said land needs to be designated for the new facility before the funding will get approved. He said

Jordan Klepper of Comedy Central visits WOJB

By Nicole Smith
Communications Officer

This past week Jordan Klepper, from Comedy Central paid a visit to WOJB. Jordan Klepper is a comedian, writer, producer and television host. He is known most recently for a program called The Opposition with Jordan Klepper that aired on Comedy Central from 2017 to 2018.

Klepper will be airing a new primetime weekly talk show called Klepper which is scheduled to air in early 2019.

Crystal Echo Hawk who is a member of the Pawnee Nation in Oklahoma and President, CEO of Echo

Hawk Consulting traveled to LCO to appear as a guest for the new docuseries.

WOJB and Waadookdaading Ojibwe Immersion Institute were also a huge interest to Klepper and his staff.

Crystal Echo Hawk and First Nations Development Institute released research in June of this year about attitudes toward and perceptions of Native Americans as part of a jointly managed effort called "Reclaiming Native Truth: A Project to Dispel Americas Myths and Misconceptions. According to the press release, the project also released two messaging guides based on the re-search findings and a narrative-change strategy framework that will be used to begin to change the false and misleading narratives about Native peoples.

Klepper said his team was struck by the story Echo Hawk was telling and this idea of invisibility of Native people. "Especially in media and entertainment and how there are no representation of Native American people, or so very few in this day and age."

"I think that as people who work in the media community, we would agree," said Klepper. "So, we wanted to know a little more about it."

Klepper explained that they are doing a show right now where they get on the road and they try to tell stories that are not being told. "We try to highlight interesting people with interesting stories, and to shine some light there."

Klepper and his team received a special concert given to them by the 4th and 5th grade class from Waadookodaaading. The class spoke only Ojibwe to him when he asked them questions, he did his best to adapt and figure out what the children were saying to him.

"The children were amazing, and I wished that I could be serenaded every day." Klepper said. "It was so wonderful to meet them, talk to them even through translation. And a chance to get a feel of what's happening in this community."

WOJB staff was interviewed about the history of the radio station and will appear in this series. Klepper will give a full interview when the series launches in 2019.

"WOJB was excited to host the Klepper Show and be given the opportunity to show a national audience some positive aspects of LCO," said Carrisa Corbine, WOJB, General Manager.

Klepper and his team also stopped in at Koobie's for coffee and a chance to talk to some elders and have coffee.

acreage has been set aside on the Northeast corner at the junction of Hwy B and K, across from the casino.

“The land must be designated early in the process to show commitment from the Tribe, but we can always move the designated location if the Membership wishes for a different spot. I just want to remind everyone that we need it to be located on the new waste water system and hopefully on the water system,” said Weaver.

A preliminary site plan for what the new health and wellness center and a grocery store on this property is available to view at the Tribal office, Weaver added. “This is just a simple site plan that can change as quickly as we need it to but it is a great tool for reference.

Weaver also said the plan could take three to five years for completion, depending on what the community would like to have in the new facility.

“We are meeting with a group from the Shakopee community on January 16th to work out a plan. They have been successful at helping 5 other tribes open new clinics under this program,” Weaver said. “We need to have a community survey and meetings to let the tribal members have a say on where to put the new health and wellness center as well as what services should be provided. I think we all want to see assisted living and a nursing home on the Reservation at some point.”

Gokee added, “It is envisioned that the new health center would offer expanded health services to the community as well as a wellness facility to combat health issues such as obesity, diabetes and heart conditions and promote overall physical health.”

Gokee said she recently attended the Indian Health Services Budget Formulation meeting at Oneida and tribes were informed that it is unknown if the Joint Venture funding will be available after 2019.

The tribal governing board will host a meeting in January to gain a better understanding of the application process and funding needed to make the project a reality, Gokee said.

Sevenwinds helps to make this holiday memorable

By Nicole Smith
Communications Officer

In the spirit of giving during the holiday season, the Sevenwinds Casino, Lodge and Conference Center departments decided that they would like to give back to the community in some small way.

Each department decorated 12 Christmas trees along with food baskets and donated them to LCO Department of Social Services Indian Child Welfare. ICW determined the families that received the baskets this year based on need and current ICW family.

"On behalf of the entire department we would like to again say Chi-Miigwech to the Sevenwinds Casino staff for their generosity to ensure a good and memorable holiday time for families in the Lco community," said ICW Director, Chally Topping-Thompson.

"Our Management Team's desire was to brighten the smiles of some local families that may need a little extra Holiday Help. Each department decorated a pre-lit Xmas tree with ornaments along with assembling food baskets that also included gifts," said Executive Director of Operations, Randy Cadotte. "The entirety of the decorations, food and gifts were donated from all levels of our Team. Our Team Members truly displayed the spirit of giving back and were very passionate and enjoyed being involved with supporting our community. Our Executive Team was extremely proud of how all our Team Members joined together and contributed to this great cause."
